

InvestEye Capital gets SEC licence

InvestEye Capital Partners Limited, a wholly indigenous Ghanaian company, has inaugurated its governing Board of Directors following the approval and receipt of an operating licence from the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

The company has been licenced to provide financial intermediation in asset and fund management, research, and investment advisory services to medium and large corporate bodies as well as high net-worth Individuals.

InvestEye has been established with the interests of investors at heart, as it seeks to help address some of the frustrations and mismanagement face with the handling of their hard-earned monies by some financial institutions.

The company is built on the founding principle that humans are born to change what they complain about, and for that reason management is poised to walk the talk by being candid with their investors and stakeholders through offering them the best returns on their investment.

The company is chaired by Mr. Pryce Kojo Thompso, an industry heavyweight and former Managing Director of Social Security Bank now Societe Generale, with Nana Osae Addo-Dankwa as the Chief Executive Officer.

The other members of the company's board are: Mr.

Lawrence Yirenkyi-Boafo formerly of The Trust Bank; Mrs. Irene Prah of Rennie's Services and IpConsult; Mr. Benjamin Boateng Afrifa; Mr. Nii Boye Adjei; Mr. Sam Brandful of Invest in Africa; Mr. David Kuduoadzi, a Managing Partner at Lexkudoz legal practitioners.

The company is imploring the general public to start the habit of investing now: "InvestEye's advice to all potential investors is: "It is not how much you earn or make that makes a difference, it is how much you keep or save and are able to invest that matters, so all potential investors must join the family today and start the habit of investing now".
